From the Phitadelphia News. Seven years ago the sale of objects of decorative art made by women was almost unknown. Since that time societies of decorative art have been established in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, St. Louis, Buffalo, Rochester and San Francisco. The statistics of these societies show that they have paid for works of decorative art produced by women over half a million dollars: by no means a small amount when the length of time and nevelty of the work to the work to the American public are considered. There is no class of work for which women who are physically or by circumstances unfitted for active work in the world are better adapted. Lace-making, painting, embroidering, tapestry weaving, modelling and carving, can be as well done in the mountains of North Carolina as in New York City. Of course, experience is required to know what sort of work is desirable, but the several societies supply that information as for as possil Provided that a woman taste in design, and a left hand to execute, the field of decorative art affords them rare chances for making names and money at the least vexa-
